

He is the W.P. Murphy Professor of Materials Science and Engineering, Electrical Engineering and Computer Science and Applied Physics at Northwestern University. He received his undergraduate degree from U. of Pennsylvania MtE 68 and Ph.D degree in Materials Science from MIT. He is a fellow of APS, ASM International, OSA and TMS.. He is author/co-author of 380 articles on electronic , magnetic and optical properties of materials and devices. He is the holder of 21 U.S. patents. He is a former president of TMS and was named a life member of TMS (the Minerals, Metals and Materials Society).