MODERN OBSERVATION

Students in the first-year Engineering Design and Communication course sequence use cell phones and cameras to observe a woman using a can opener. Tasked with designing an easier-to-use utensil for people with arthritis, the students began the design process by observing a variety of individuals attempting to open a can.