

New York City Department of Design and Construction

Here at DDC, our Infrastructure Division delivers critical projects within New York City's five boroughs and is one of the largest programs in the country at over $2 billion dollars. These projects include critical roadway and plaza reconstruction, green infrastructure, resiliency and sewer and water main construction. As our infrastructure program is expanding, we are seeking Civil Engineering Interns to assist in engineering work related to construction. Selected candidates will receive hands-on training in one or more of the following specialized engineering areas: drafting, engineering investigations, estimating, specifications, construction management, structural computations, field surveys and some design related site inspections. Please see attached job posting for additional details. We are happy to hold web-based interviews for interested candidates.
