

FELLOWSHIP OPPORTUNITIES IN GLOBAL HEALTH

RESEARCH FELLOWSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

- The John and Martha Mabie Fellowship for Public Health Research is designed to create research opportunities for Northwestern students. Applicants may design research projects for implementation abroad or in the United States. The award amount range is up to $4,000.
- The Radulovacki Global Health Scholars Research Fellowship funds strong, well-prepared, and creative projects. Groups consisting of 3-4 students working on a single project are highly encouraged to apply, though all projects will be considered. The award amount range is up to $4,000 per person.

Students must take GBL_HLTH 320: Qualitative Research Methods in Global Health (or an equivalent) to be eligible for these fellowships.

"Partnership Development and Capacity Building With a Grassroots Organization in Rural Uganda" GlobeMed at Northwestern
GROW Team: Alice Schaack, Yasmine Diara, and Alexis Snowden
Radulovacki Fellowship winners

PREVIOUS WINNERS & RESEARCH TOPICS INCLUDE:

Public Healthcare in Germany:
The Response to the Influx of Refugees and Migrants

Subin Hwang, Radulovacki Fellowship

Noise Intensity & Incidence in the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (South Africa)

Petrina LaFaire & Anna Rietti, Radulovacki Fellowship

Redefining Medical Tourism: Understanding Motivations to Travel for

Healthcare in El Paso, Texas

Julia Shenkman, Mabie Fellowship

Investigating the Global Provision of Palliative Care Among Children with Cancer

Brian Cheng, Mabie Fellowship

Applications are due Friday, March 15, 2021

For more information and to apply, visit

<https://www.globalhealthstudies.northwestern.edu/research/>