

Materials Science and Engineering Preparation for Core Courses

Temporary advisers and core-course instructors will assist students in determining their academic readiness for the graduate core program. To insure adequate preparation, students may, with the permission of their adviser and the associate chairperson, include up to two classes normally not open to MSE graduate students in the fifteen-course requirement. The course must aid preparation for the core courses and must not correspond to any courses taken previously.

If, after discussing your academic preparation with your temporary adviser and the core course instructors, you need to take one of the preparatory courses in preparation, fill out the information below, obtain the necessary signatures, and return the form to Peggy Adamson.
