

Brad Benhart

Brad has been working in the construction industry for over 20 years. In 2009, Benhart furthered his commitment to construction education by accepting an Assistant Clinical Professorship at Purdue University in their Building Construction Management program. Brad is focused on construction supervision, construction administration, scheduling, and project controls. His position allows him to further develop construction education and be an industry advocate for the next generation of builders. His previous position was that of Vice President with Pepper Construction Company of Chicago, IL. While at Pepper, Brad was a group leader who managed multiple projects ranging from $100k to $250 million dollars. His entire career he has been actively involved in construction education and training. He has been an adjunct professor at Northwestern University in project management and has actively taught and trained many employees in the industry. In addition to his teaching responsibilities, he is a principal and founder of I.C.R. – Integrated Construction Resources.
